

EDWARD WHITE POST TO CHEER WALTER REED BOYS

Employees of the central office of the Civil Service Commission, who recently organized the Edward Douglas White Post of the American Legion, are planning to make Christmas merry for the boys at Walter Reed Hospital.

In order to carry out their plans the members of the post are raising a Christmas fund. The post has arranged with the St. Patrick's Players to present "Leave It to Pierre," a two-act musical comedy, at Carroll Hall on Wednesday, December 14.

Post Adj. George A. Bamford is chairman of the committee in charge of the show. He is assisted by Post Commander Joseph J. Idler, Post Historian S. Hunter Taylor, John B. Deegan, Thomas F. McLaughlin and Orland H. Smith, Jr.

IN NEW YORK EVERYONE LOOKS INTERESTING

SAYS FAY KING

You're Always Thinking You See Someone You Want to See

By FAY KING.

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.—Everybody looks interesting in New York.

Any old bird with gray face feathers can get a stir out of strangers if he happens to be walking toward the Millionaire's Club, and the doddler you are down around the Village, provided your dressing sack is orange or your grease stains are in proper batik designs, you may be mistaken for a great artist.

In some small burg Rockefeller himself could lean up against the postoffice and they'd just think it was some guy that looks like him. That's one of the thrills you can get in New York. Thinking you see somebody you always wanted to see or being mistook for somebody you always wanted to be.

It's great. If you happen to be passing the Vanderbilts' house when the rubberneck wagon goes by you can stop to scratch a match near the front door and you get the same sensation as living there, without worrying about the taxes.

The floating population will give you a second look, too, and that help a little. If you aren't so much in favor of impersonating the millionaire class, you got to do it in a stick a bun in your pocket so it will bulge like a gun and hang around the Bowery till the sight-seeing mob arrives and they'll edge away like you was one of the gunmen they've read so much about.

You're doing them a favor and having some fun yourself, 'cause they would sure be disappointed if they didn't see some mean-looking citizen on the trip.

Just to show you how it works. When I first came to New York I went to a cafe where they told me that none but celebrities eat, and I sat there eyeing a couple guys whom I thought were great poets. It turned out later they were a couple cannibals from Kan-kakee, but as long as I flattered I was going to live here and didn't want any visitors to be disappointed in the place, when these guys asked Betty and me to sign our names on their menu cards for souvenirs we signed fictitious high sounding names and told 'em we were artist models.

No use spoiling their evening by letting 'em find out we were just good, honest, hard-working girls. They were out to have a look at the artists' quarter and it would have been an awful bump in their trip if they hadn't met any Bohemians.

I bet they are still telling the home folks about the devilish dames they met in New York. I bet there's many a dame out West thinking of the young millionaire in the big fur coat that flirted with her in front of his house on Fifth avenue. Wouldn't it be tough to tell her it was the chauffeur?

COLUMBUS, Ga., Dec. 6.—Alabama authorities today were making a thorough investigation into the flogging of O. Emory Wilkinson, eleven years old, grandson of White, who was shot in both legs in making an effort to protect the old man, probably will recover, physicians said today.

JEALOUS WOMAN LEAPS TO DEATH FROM AUTO

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Dec. 6.—Madened with jealousy because John Kohl, with whom she had kept company for several years, had flirted with a married woman at a party, Miss Ethel Murphy, thirty years old, of Pittsford, leaped from an automobile in which she was being taken home and fell backward to the pavement. The machine was being driven by Kohl.

The fall fractured the woman's skull and she died. An investigation by the police resulted in the arrest of Kohl for driving an automobile while intoxicated.
